Death of Mrs. Jim Chamblee

Last Sunday at noon after an illness lasting through several months, Mrs. J. W. Chamblee died.

Mrs. Chamblee was taken ill some time last October and for more than a month suffered with high fever, although everything possible was done to relieve her. An operation was finally decided upon and she was taken to the Angelina Hospital where she underwent a serious operation and for several weeks it was thought the operation would be the means of a complete recovery, and she was for a few days clear of fever, but we understand tuberculosis set up, which, with the weakened condition of her system could not be withstood but for a short time.

She leaves a husband and several small children, the youngest being only six months old, besides other near relatives and a host of friends.

The remains were carried to Shofner Graveyard where interment was made Monday afternoon.

The family has the sincere sympathy of their many friends in their bereavement.

Little Mary Ellen Dunham

Mary Ellen, the twenty-seven months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Dunham, who had been sick for several days, mention of which was made in last week's issue of The Messenger, is dead, the soul of this sweet little one taking its flight last Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Its little body was laid to rest in Huntington Cemetery Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, after a short but impressive service conducted by Rev. Jeff Rhodes, Pastor of the Baptist church here.

Another family circle has been broken, the patter of the little feet are no longer heard in the home, the few little words Mary Ellen could speak which brought so much joy to the fond parents can not be heard any more, the home seems desolate, the future dark, and the hearts of the father and mother are bound in sorrow.

Too many people are inclined not to think seriously over the death of a little child, and only those who have lost one of these little ones, who have endured the pangs and the loneliness which the loss of such a one brings, know how heavy the clouds hang and how utterly desolate this old world seems. Truly, one who has not passed through a similar trial does not know how to sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. Dunham in this the darkest hour that can come to any home.

We do not know; we cannot understand just why God reached this little flower. But we know that God doeth all things well, and some sweet day, in God's own good time, He shall lift the veil from our eyes and we shall see—and we shall know.

The bereaved family has our sincere sympathy, and may they in their hour of trouble look to Him, submissive to His will, whose grace is sufficient to sustain through all the dark hours that come to every life.

Prominent Citizen Passes Away

After a lingering illness lasting through several weeks, during which time he was under the constant treatment and attention of competent physicians, L. E. Baird, honored citizen of Huntington and a life long resident of Angelina county, died Monday night at 11:20 o'clock.

Funeral services were held at the Baptist church, of which Mr. Baird was a member, at 10:00 a. m. Wednesday, the services being conducted by Rev. W. T. McMullen, and the body was laid to rest in Huntington Cemetery.

The deceased was born November 3, 1851 and at the time of his death was 70 years and 5 months old. Surviving him are his wife and six daughters, Mesdames F. L. Dunham, Bertie Gill, W. D. Ivy, Ross Jones, Miss Lila Baird, all of Huntington, and Mrs. Lela Holt of Mertens, and one sister, Mrs. Sue Jones of Huntington, besides grandchildren, nieces and nephews and hundreds of friends.

"Uncle Lewis," as he was called by nearly every one who knew him, has been a life-long resident of Angelina county. He was one of the first to go into business in Huntington and for twenty years he was one of Huntington's foremost business men. He retired from active business in 1919.

Uncle Lewis loved Huntington and always bore his part of the burden and did his share in anything [illegible] and so loyal has he been to Huntington and so much interest has he manifested in the town in which he chose to make his home that he was frequently referred to as "the Mayor of Huntington." At Lufkin, where he formerly lived, he had many friends and among those from Lufkin who attended his funeral were Senator I. D. Fairchild, Judge L. D. Guinn, M. F. Cochran and J. J. Collins.

It was the writer's good pleasure to be associated with the deceased in a business way almost continuously for the past 15 years, and I had every opportunity to know him, and as a result of our association I respected him and loved him. He was a good friend. He was a good friend to me. He was just as honest as a man can be. He felt an interest in mankind and took a delight in helping any deserving person. One thing most admirable about him was his love for his home. I don't think I ever saw a man who thought more of his home and family than did Uncle Lewis. He had the utmost respect for the wishes of his wife—"Ma," as he always called her—and it seemed to afford him the greatest delight to comply with any little request that "Ma" might make of him.

His consideration of others was demonstrated when, on the night before his death, he told the immediate relatives who were ministering to him that "they had been good to him, and that they had done everything they could for him," then he added that he would not be with them but a short time and gave them the sweet consolation that "I am ready to go."

In the going away of this good man Mrs. Baird has lost a devoted companion, the children a loving father, and the community a useful citizen.

The Messenger, with the many other friends of the family, extend to them our sincere sympathy in their hour of trouble.

Calaboose Complete

The calaboose at Huntington has been completed,—another addition to "Huntington's skyline." It is by no means what you would call an "elaborate affair" but on the contrary appears to be rather "close quarters." It was built of two by fours (laid flat) is about fifteen feet long by about ten feet wide and is high enough (inside measurement) to permit a six-footer to stand upright (nearly). There are two compartments to the contraption, each of said compartments being separated from the other compartment by a partition constructed of material similiar to the walls thereof. Not any too much attention was given to the matter of ventilation in the construction of the building, however we can see no reason why one could not keep cool in either of the rooms, provided the weather was not too warm.

Children who have worms are pale, sickly and peevish. A dose or two of White's Cream Vermifuge will clear them out and restore rosy cheeks and cheerful spirits. Price, 35c. Sold by C. B. Stewart & Son. 1 m.

Mr. J. P. Hennesy, who has been prescription clerk at Burke's drug store for more than a year, has resigned his position, and will probably leave Lufkin in a short time to accept similar employment. He and his family have acquired many friends in this city who will regret to see them go away. His place has been taken by Mr. George Herrington, formerly of Huntington, who now resides in Lufkin with his family, and who has had many years' of experience as a prescription druggist, and who will be pleased to meet his many friends in his new location. —Lufkin News.

Josh Cochran Hurt In Auto Collision

As the result of two cars colliding last night about 7 o'clock in the vicinity of the central school building, Josh Cochran was painfully wounded about the face and hands when his body was forced through the windshield of a Ford coupe, owned by Joshua Collins, and driven by a young man by the name of Turner, who is employed at the Lufkin Foundry. Mrs. Cochran was also in the car, but sustained only slight injuries together with the shock. The other car was an Essex, driven by Calvin Mantooth, who was accompanied by Ruel Kimmey. None of the others were injured, sustaining only minor bruises and scratches, while the Ford coupe was converted into a considerable wreck, the radiator being demolished, the engine pushed back under the front of the machine, a part of the steering wheel dismantled, the radius rods converted into ideal coils for "distilling" purposes and and other parts and fixings being more or less disturbed. The Essex did not fare so badly, although the radiator could not withstand the impact.

Mr. Cochran was rushed to the office of Dr. J. C. VanNuys where proper medical attention was given, then carried to his home. It is said that blame for the unfortunate accident really attaches to no one; it was merely a case where judgement was at fault, and the collision came before a successful effort could be made to avoid it. Neither of the cars were going at more than moderate speed at the time of the accident—Lufin News, Monday.

"Tanlac did what everything else failed to do." Thousands have said it. So will you. Chas. B. Stewart & Son.

River Dump Damaged

The extent of damage by flood waters of the Angelina river to the long dump leading away from the new bridge on the Lufkin-Nacogdoches highway will not be definitely known until the water recedes. It is a fact that something like 300 feet, more or less, of the dump on this side of the river has been washed away by the raging flood which went over the embankment yesterday morning and rose to the sills of the bridge proper. Parties living near the river say the stream went four feet higher than it has been known to go in the past fifteen years, and others say the river was never as high before this occasion except in 1884. Hundreds of people from Lufkin visited the scene yesterday in automobiles, and saw the "ocean."

This is a great calamity, of course, but it can be and will be overcome just as soon as possible. The commissioners' court may be depended upon to take the necessary steps to repair the damage as soon as it can be ascertained under the circumstances, while there is comfort in the knowledge that it was no worse than it was. It may be several days before travel can be resumed, as some temporary arrangement will have to be made for passage where the breaks occured.—Lufkin Daily News.

W. J. Davis Died Near Biloxi

W. J. Davis who formerly lived near Huntington and who was well and favorably known here, but who for the past four or five years has lived near Biloxi School House, died last Saturday and was buried Sunday afternoon, his pastor, Rev. W. T. McMullen, conducting the funeral services.

The deceased was eighty three years of age at the time of his death. He leaves a widow and three children, two sons and one daughter to mourn his departure.

"Brother Davis," as everyone knew him, was a lovable character. To be in his presence was to be attracted by his sincerety and honesty. He was a good man, quiet, unassuming and a true Christian, and to talk with him was to be convinced that the one outstanding purpose of his life was to live a Christian life, and to be ready when the summons came. And he "fought the good fight; he kept the faith" and the last intelligible expression from this sainted warrior's lips before he passed to be with the Father was "Praise the Lord" and he went to receive the crown of righteousness laid up for him.

In the death of Brother Davis, the wife has lost a devoted companion, his children a kind loving father, the community a useful citizen, and another Christian has gone to Heaven.

Snap Shots From Powder Hill

My Verry Deer Mistur Edditur:

I am a verry bizzy man, bein a farmeer, and I haint got no tyme tu fule away on that foolishness of Jonas P. McGinnis. If it warnt fur the good peepul uv Powder Hill awantin me to ansur him, I wuld quit right here. Whut he sais is a mess. He thinks that the peepul think that he dru them thor picturs that wuz all mixed up in hiz last artickell. But the schule childrun in Powder Hill all no better than that. I confess that hit made me a little darn mad, but when I thout about how Jonas looked when that possum pulled all of hiz pants off, I jes liked to have come very neer to have killed myself alaughfin. That wont no picture. Hit wuz a fact.

The readur will take note uv the fact that Jonas did not say nuthin about my abein uv a hard shell. The reesun is that Jonas noes that nearly every body in Powder Hill air Hardshell, and he iz afraid uv them. Then he thought that he wuld set the Ku Kluxes on me, or rather turn folks agin me by sayin that I and Samp Kenebrew air good friends, and every body remembers that day Samp shot at Jonas one nite just as Jonas wuz aleavin Samp's smoke house with a ham under hiz arm. Jonas tried to make folks beleve that hit wuz the Ku Kluxes that shot him, and filled him full of little shot right where Cordelia sowed on the patch that the possum pulled off. Every body noes that thor haint no Ku Kluxes in Powder Hill, and if there were, Jonas wuld be the first to see them. Them thor robes that they wear wuld scare Jonas tu death. I du not belong tu the Ku Kluxes, and I advise Jonas tu be very karefull about how he speaks. He might git sum more shot in him.

I have told the peepul all I know about Jonas. He is a yankee, that he stold a hoss frum Lee's army, an old no count man, with a wife and sum children that he kaint feed, and every body noes all about him. So now I am agoin tu qnit, and write about other things. All the great daily papurs air axin me tu write fur them, and they will pay me fur hit, and as I have a family tu support, I guess I will du so. I dont mean that I wont write fur the Messenger. I will. I like hit fine and think the edditur a fine chap.

I am bizzy with my gardin this week. My old lady had her furst mess of Kentucky Wonder Beens tuther day, and hit keeps me bizzy awerkin in that gardin. Crops air alookin fairly well down on my lower farm.

Deer Mistur Edditur, you will have to excuse me Wife has just seen Samp Kenebrew agoin over to Jonas P. McGinnis tu set up to nite. Poor Jonas is dead. If I have said anything tu hurt hiz feelins I am sure sorry.

WE'RE COLD TO REFORMS

We have not had in our time a President who was a business man or who had close acquaintance with business methods. The Chief Executives have, for the most part, not been executives as that term is now understood. Anything but. They regarded the governmental machine as one regards a hired motor car—a piece of mechanism in which to get somewhere, and with no thought of its power-transmission system or economy of operation.

Mr. Taft did sense the fact that he was at the head of an organization whose activities are almost as varied as those of the entire business world. Mr. Harding, I believe, shares this feeling.

As Mr. Taft pointed out, this great organization has never been studied in detail as one piece of administrative mechanism. No comprehensive effort has been made, until very recently, to list its many activities or to group them in such a way as to present a clear picture of what the government is doing. No satisfactory statement has ever been published of the financial transactions of the government as a whole. With large interests at stake congress and the executive have never had all the information which should be currently available if the most intelligent direction is to be given to the daily national business.

Congress, the President and the administrative officers have been attempting to discharge their duties without full information as to the agencies through which the work of the government is being performed. In the past, services, agencies, bureaus, what not, have been created one by one as exigencies have seemed to demand, with little or no reference to any scheme of organization of the government as a whole.

Mr. Taft pointed out all this and made an earnest effort to change it. With what result? Why, just exactly none. Congress was cold. The public—meaning you and me—was colder. We didn't take any interest in the project, and therefore congress politely yawned it away into the tall grass and out of sight. Mr. Taft was given enough money to employ an efficiency and economy commission and to make inquiry "into the methods of transacting the public business of the executive departments and other government establishments."

The inquiry was made and the changes recommended, but nothing has ever been done about it. This economy and efficiency commission was very conservative and cautious. It took Mr. Taft's view that the problem of good administration is not one that can be solved at one time. It is a continuously present one. This commission, made up of excellent men, suggested that the revenue-cutter service be abolished and its activities be taken over by other services. It was estimated that by so doing a saving of not less than $1,000,000 could be made.

Another report recommended that the lighthouse and life-saving services be administered by a single bureau instead of as at that time, by two bureaus located in different departments. It was estimated that this consolidation would result in a saving of not less than $100,000 yearly.

The abolition of the returns office of the Interior department was recommended, at an estimated direct saving of about $25,000 a year, in addition to a large indirect economy in the reduction of work to be performed in the several offices.

The consolidation of the six auditing offices of the treasury and the inclusion in the auditing system of the seven naval officers who audited customs accounts at the principal ports was urged. The change was expected to produce an immediate saving of at least $135,000 yearly.

From this modest start other changes and reforms and savings were to be made.

But we weren't interested in the high cost of government or the high cost of living eleven years ago. Mr. Taft didn't get a rise out of us. He didn't have much of a pull with congress, either, poor man, and all his inquiry went for nothing as far as any action was concerned.

He and his commission did bring out and establish, however, certain facts and conditions. It was a trustworthy and competent investigation as far as it went. That is something to the good.

There is a patent disposition in congress now to take the whole problem of the routine administrative processes of the government under consideration and see how best to improve them. Whether anything really worth while will come out of it will depend entirely on the degree of interest you display. If you will take the trouble to show that you know that the national business is mismanaged and costs too much, and that you are tired of it, there will be action.
