FOREWORD

One pledge we owe to Diboll High . . . and how much we do owe to our school. Classes, meetings, athletic and other events have made this year one of the finest ever.

Like everything must move forward, or fail, so our school has done this. Even with its imperfections, still we are very proud of it, and of those who are a part of it. As you turn these pages of pictured memories, we sincerely trust you will be very proud of Diboll High School and also proud of your part in making it a good school.

IN MEMORIAM

J. R. TELFORD, JR.

Whatever qualities are needed to make a person outstanding, J. R. Telford had them. When he was here on campus, everyone became happier just because he was present. He was unique because he never stopped giving to make someone's way a little brighter.

J. R. was well loved by all who knew him--if he had an enemy, he soon made a friend. It was impossible to be around him, and not think well of him. Because he was such a fine person, the Lumberjack staff dedicates this yearbook to him.

1961 HALLOWEEN COURT

This year's Halloween Carnival was very successful as the various grades presented entertainment to carry out the theme of "Grand Old Names." Equally glamorous was the court royalty represented by Dukes and Duchesses from each grade, and reigning over all were the King and Queen of high school, Sandra Black and Sill Bunch and the King and Queen of grade school, Jerry Coble and Keith Collins.

Chapter 3

IN THE BEGINNINGS OF GOVERNMENT IN THE UNITED STATES

The roots of American government reach deep into the past. The system of government as it now exists in the United States grew from many political beginnings. Some of these were planted in America, and some were brought here from other countries. Some were pulled out of this soil by Americans themselves. Some were pulled out of the soil of other countries by Americans who went to live there.

The Colonial Period

Our English Heritage. The Spanish, Dutch, Norwegians, French, Swedish, and other European settlers in America all had their influence on the development of government in the United States. But it was the English who came in the largest numbers. It was the English who settled the thirteen colonies that stretched for 1,300 miles along the Atlantic seaboard. So it was English ideas and English institutions that were planted in America.

These early pioneers who chiseled the wilderness into settlements did not have to look into the future to know what kind of government they wanted. They looked into the past. They had lived under it. They had fought for it. They had come to the New World to get away from it. They came here to search for greater freedom.

Founding Fathers of Philadelphia, in the summer of 1787, looked to the past for their ideas. Behind them, they could see a long history of English struggles for liberty. They could see the ruins of their ancestors' castles and churches. They could see the graves of their forefathers.

SETTLERS AT WORK
Early Americans had to live together in harmony, or they would not survive. This was called "government in order to live," the beginning of our government today.

They knew that they had inherited the rights of Englishmen. They knew that these rights had been won by long years of struggle. They knew that they had been written down in documents such as the Magna Carta, the Petition of Right, and the Bill of Rights. They knew that these documents had been signed by kings and queens. They knew that they had been signed only after the people had forced their rulers to sign them.

(1) The Rule of Law. The settlers brought with them to America the idea that all men must be governed by law. They brought with them the idea that no man is above the law. They brought with them the idea that all men must be treated equally before the law. They brought with them the idea that no man can be punished except by law. They brought with them the idea that no man can be punished except for breaking a law that was known before he broke it.

These ideas are the foundation of the English system of justice. They are the foundation of the American system of justice. They are the foundation of the system of justice in all countries that have been influenced by England and America.

(2) The Twin Concepts of Limited Government and Civil Liberties. They brought with them, too, the twin ideas of limited government and civil liberties. That is, that government is not all-powerful, that government is limited in what it may do, and, especially, that it is limited in the sense that each man has certain rights that government cannot injure or take away. These great principles of freedom were proclaimed in such historic English documents as the Magna Carta in 1215, the Petition of Right in 1628, and the Bill of Rights and the Act of Toleration of 1689.

(3) The Concept of Representative Government. A third vitally important concept brought to America in English ships was that of representative government. For centuries there had been developing in England the of which are to be found today — county, borough, jury, sheriff, coroner, and justice of the peace, for example. And all of these were well-known in England long before the first Englishman ever heard of America.

MRS. BEA BURKEHALTER

A Principal's job is one which demands patience, and dedication to perform all the duties of disciplining students so that they grow to be fine citizens. Mrs. Burkehalter, in all her years of service, has done a marvelous job of just this . . . we salute her as being a vital part of our school system.
