MOST EVERYONE knows the Pledge of Allegiance to the U.S. flag, but do all you good Texans know the pledge to the state flag?

Members of the Anthony Smith chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution do. They begin all their meetings with the pledge and, in case you've forgotten, here is how it goes:

"Honor the Texas flag — I pledge allegiance to thee, Texas one and indivisible."

It's short and easy enough for all Texans to remember.

Taking pride in our heritage

DOES ANYBODY remember what happened 197 years ago this week?

Most of us probably don't recall, but certainly ought to. This week marks the 197th anniversary of the signing of the United States Constitution.

Constitution Week, as it has come to be known, is the one week out of the year when all of us should make an effort to better acquaint ourselves with one of the most important documents in our country's history.

Our Constitution was not just thrown together. It was the end product of a tremendous amount of research and hard work by some of the greatest minds of the day.

Although it is not a flawless document and has been amended through the years, it has never been fundamentally revised. It has survived almost 200 years and still stands as a model for what we believe to be the best form of government that exists in the world today.

On the page opposite this one, Mrs. Loyd Richardson of the Anthony Smith Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution takes an in-depth historical look at the Constitution and the history behind it.

Take some time this week to read it and renew your sense of pride in what it means to be an American.

Yankee Doodle Dandy named George M. Cohan wrote these immortal words and they make our blood tingle — make us stand up just a bit straighter — every time this song is played and sung.

It's a Grand Old Flag — over 200 years old — and it stands for everything fine about our great country – the most generous and the most criticized in the world. This is the National Election year — when emotions run high and charges and counter charges are made almost without thought. In addition this year our country was host for the XXIII Olympic Games when world athletic supremacy is contested. Let's show the world, the visitors from everywhere, that we are really ONE NATION, that we stand up and cheer for our country, our Olympic contestants, that we fly our flag high, wide and handsome to show our real down deep national spirit.

Constitution should not be taken lightly

By MRS. LOYD RICHARDSON
Anthony Smith Chapter, DAR

The week of Sept. 17-21 we commemorate the signing of one of the most important documents in our history — the Constitution.

Richardson

The 197th anniversarY of this event should not be taken lightly since, through this document, every American citizen is given the foundation of a free, prosperous and independent life.

It has been said, "To understand the Constitution of the United States is the clarion call of the hour, a call as dynamic as when Moses wrote the Ten Commandments."

Let's return and look briefly at the background of the Constitution. After the United States won its independence in the Revolutionary War, it faced the great problems of peacetime government. It had to enforce law and order, collect taxes, pay what was then a staggering public debt, and regulate and stimulate trade. The new national also had to deal successfully with the Indian tribes and with other governments.

Leaders of the infant republic soon became convinced that the articles of Confederation of 1781 could not solve these problems and perform other tasks of governing a free, active and expanding country.

By 1783, the nation had entered a period of unstable commercial and political conditions. Each state acted almost like an independent country. Each ran its own affairs exactly as it saw fit, with no concern for the broad purposes of the republic.

The states circulated a dozen different currencies, most of them inflated to a point where they had practically no value. Neighboring states raised tariff barriers against each other.

Great Britain refused to reopen the channels of trade. The state legislatures declined to pay the debts they had assumed during the Revolutionary War. Many states passed laws that made it possible for debtors to escape paying their obligations.

Worst of all, some men began to think once again of taking up arms in order to solve their problems. In Virignia and other states, George Washington and other leaders wondered whether the colonies had rebelled in vain. Men such as Washington and Alexander Hamilton viewed the situation with grave concern.

The farseeing Hamilton directed a series of political maneuvers that resulted in the Confederation Congress calling a convention to meet in Philadelphia on May 14, 1787 for the "sole and express purpose of revising the Articles of Confederation."

The 55 delegates who attended the convention did far more than the Congress had intended them to do. They gave up any ideas of fixing the Articles. During that hot, tiresome summer, they wrote a remarkable plan of government, the United States Constitution.

Briefly let's review the Constitutional Convention.

The convention was supposed to open on May 14, 1787. But few of the 55 delegates had arrived in Philadelphia by that date. By May 25, with delegates from a quorum of seven states present, the convention formally opened in Independence Hall. Twelve states had responded to the call for the convention. Rhode Island refused to send delegates because it feared that a new constitution would remove its power to tax the use of imported supplies by neighboring states.

Of the 55 delegates, 39 stayed to the end and signed the United States Constitution on Sept. 17, 1787. William Jackson, the convention secretary, attested their signatures. The delegates included some of the most experienced and patriotic men in the new republic. George Washington served as the presiding officer throughout the sessions. The beloved Benjamin Franklin, at the age of 81, inspired other members by his mere presence.

The brilliant Alexander Hamilton expressed views too strongly for the other delegates. The astute James Madison won for himself the title of "Father of the Constitution." Governor Morris was probably the most influential delegate after Madison and Washington. He was given the task of putting all the convention's resolutions and decisions into polished form. Morris actually "wrote the Constitution."

Several important figures of the time did not attend the convention. John Adams, John Ray and Thomas Jefferson were absent on other duties. Samuel Adams failed to be appointed a delegate from Massachusetts because he opposed granting any more power to the national government. Four leading members of the convention — Elbridge Gerry, George Mason, Luther Martin and Edmund Randolph — declined to sign the Constitution because they disagreed with it.

The fathers of the Constitution were not just a group of casual people who started a casual thing in a casual way. They had studied the ancient civilizations and the methods of government employed therein. They had studied the medieval systems and various governments of their day. They were well acquainted with the great classical writings on the subjects, therefore, came to their tasks very thoroughly equipped. They knew the results of the experiments in government through the ages. The delegates also drew upon their own experiences. The framers of disagreed on details. But t were remarkably united in insisting that the new government should be strong enough to meet its obligations, and safe enough to respect the liberties of the people.

The convention agreed that the government could be organized after nine states had approved the Constitution. Less than three months after the Constitution had been signed, Delaware became the first state to ratify it, New Hampshire was the ninth state, on June 21, 1788. But the Founding Fathers could not be sure that the Constitution would be given a fair trial until the key states of New York and Virginia had ratified it. Powerful organized opposition to the Constitution had developed in these two states, and in others.

Critics objected that a bill of rights had not been included, the President had too much independence, the Senate was too aristocratic, Congress had too many powers, and the national government had too much authority. Friends of the Constitution rallied support for ratification. They became known as Federalists. Their opponents were called Anti-Federalists. The two factions promoted their causes in newspapers, in pamphlets and in debates in the ratifying conventions. They developed the first political groupings that became known as political parties.

Virginia ratified the Constitution on June 25, 1788, and New York followed. But two states — North Carolina and Rhode Island — refused to approve the Constitution and take part in the new government until the first Congress had begun to adopt a bill of rights.

The Federalists might never have obtained ratification in several key states if they had not promised to support amendments to the Constitution. These amendments were designed to protect individual liberties against possible encroachment by the new government.

James Madison led the new Congress in proposing 12 amendments to be adopted by the states under the amending process outlined in Article V of the Constitution. By December of 1791, enough states had approved 10 of the 12 amendments to make them a permanent addition to the Constitution. These amendments are known as the Bill of Rights, although only the first eight list exact individual freedoms.

The Constitution has developed into a charter well suited to the needs of a great industrial nation. Yet it has never been fundamentally revised. It was Madison who said, "In framing a system which we wish to last for ages, we should not lose sight of the changes which ages will produce." The Constitution was designed to serve the interests of all the people — rich and poor, Northerners and Southerners, farmers, workers and businessmen.

The great principles of the Constitution have been in tune with the beliefs and hopes of an expanding democracy. These principles include the sovereignty of the people, supremacy of the national government, respect for the states, division of power among three equal independent branches, separation of church and state, and rule by a clear-cut majority.

The British statesman, William E. Bladstone, described the Constitution as "the most powerful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man." In a world of change and struggle, we American people have no more precious possession than this great document. The story of how the framers wrote the Constitution and how it has met the challenges of American democracy is one that people should never tire of reading.

Let us thoroughly acquaint ourselves with this magnificient document, which is ours to respect, ours to protect and ours to use — now!

Our area will be observing this all important anniversary in various ways. Five of the area radio stations will be making spot announcements during Constitution Week; our local and area newspapers will be carrying information, as well as the proclamations of Constitution Week Observance by the Mayors of Lufkin, Diboll and Wells. The public libraries will be promoting this observance as well as the libraries in each of the schools in Lufkin. Bank marquees at First City and Republic Bank, as well as the Holiday Inn, will have on them notations concerning Constitution Week. Our local TV station has filmed a spot to be used during the week. Listen, read and watch all of our media during this week.

All of you can participate in this observance by reading your Constitution and very importantly — fly your flag and encourage others to do so.

Poetic chronology to be published

Margie Kirkland chosen to contribute

Margie Kirkland of Lufkin is one of 150 active contemporary poets who will have an original poem published in an upcoming volume of poems commemorating the Sesquicentennial of the State of Texas, 1986.

Kirkland

The anthology will be entitled, "Of Hide and Horn." Editors are Peggy Z. and Edmund C. Lynch of Austin. Nortex Press, in conjunction with Eakin Publishing Co., Inc., of Austin, recognized specialists in Texana, will produce the collection. The anthology will be released the latter part of June, 1985, in time for the convention of the National Federation of State Poetry Societies, Inc. meeting in Austin.

"Of Hide and Horn" has the concept,"The Poet's View of Texas History," year by year covering the 150 years. Specifically, it is a poetic chronology, one poem for each of those years, not over 36 lines in length.

In their letter to Mrs. Kirkland, the editors stated: "It may be assumed, we think, that the poet's view of a significant historical event may differ from those found in a conventional narrative history; and further, that such views expressed in poetic style will enhance the image for the reader as well as provide a broad based view of Texas history from a different perspective. Each of the 150 years has interesting facts, activities and personages that may be recognized, some perhaps not widely known. The decision as to historical significance is left to the poet; both a burden and a challenge.

"We invite you to write a poem on the year 1870 for this anthology."

Mrs. Kirkland is a member of the Poetry Society of Texas, the Angelina County Historical Commission, Daughters of the American Revolution and United Daughters of the Confederacy.

She is the author of four books of poems, a collection of stories, "The Garage Apartment," and another book of stories, essays and meditations to be released in Oct. In addition, she wrote and compiled "The Physicians: 100 years of Dedication" for the Angelina County Medical Society in 1982.

Of her poem to be included in "Of Hide and Horn," Mrs. Kirkland said: "Research proved that in 1870 Texas was still in the throes of Reconstruction and we were an unhappy state indeed. The War Between the States was a bitter memory. Governor Edmund J. Davis created one of the darkest periods of Texas history, for he called on his State Police to insure law and order and they took liberties beyond the bounds of reason.

"There is a little-known account of a tradgedy conducted by the State Police. This is the event that captured my imagination and I wrote it in narrative form, following the account of it given in the book, "Texas Under the Carpetbaggers.""

THE STATE POLICE*

"Three men are here. I see them, Henry, near the gate outside," Amanda Kelly whispered to her husband. "Two we know are wearing hats pulled down on their faces — the other one's a stranger. They're on their horses and too quiet. I don't like it, Henry. Please don't let them cause us trouble."

Honest Dewitt County Texas, young Kelly walked to the door. One man spoke. "Step outside. We want to talk with you. We want you to go with us to Hallettsville." "Well, my horse is out; I'll have to drive him up." "Take my mule." That was Doc White speaking; then to his pal, John Meador, "You go and help him." Henry turned and went inside to fetch his gun and holster. "No need to take that six-shooter. You're a prisoner. Simmons here's with the State Police; he lives in Hallettsville, and he's been sent for you and your brother William."

Amanda wept as Henry changed his clothes. She brought the fresh-ironed homespun shirt, the pants she'd washed by hand just yesterday; and as she held these things, she felt some mighty premonition shake her soul. "They mean to harm you, darling, and William too. They'll leave from here and get your brother — any why, I'd like to know. That new Governor Davis is behind it. Reconstruction, hah!

"Now Mandy, don't you worry! I'm innocent of any crime.

"But Henry, I'm afraid. They say the State Police don't mind to murder in the name of E.J. Davis, that Texan-hater-dictator who's put himself in office to get revenge.

Amanda reached the hilltop then to watch. The men were in a clearing, closed in by thick bushes. They talked and Sutton raised his gun and fired. William, loading his pipe, sank to the ground. Another shot rang out. Henry fell from his horse. Again and again White and Sutton fired on those two bodies smoldering in dust and smoke. Amanda screamed and ran in anguish toward the scene. The killers disappeared into the brush.

Kirkland 'narrates the everyday'

BY LYNDA CHEAVENS

Margie Kirkland has written an alive little book entitled "A Grateful Heart."

It's a delightful collection of stories, meditations and essays that is earning splended notices among reviewers who were invited by the publishers, Broadman Press of Nashville, Tenn., to respond with pre-sale critiques of the book.

"I always wanted to narrate the everyday," Mrs. Kirkland said when asked what gave her the idea of writing the 31 chapters which went into "A Grateful Heart."

And, that is just what she has done.

With compassion, humor and understanding, this well-known Lufkin author has written her very own love letter to the world. The book is about real love and real relationships.

Mrs. Kirkland is a people person and it shows in "A Grateful Heart." She "thinks" people -- family, friends, acquaintances andstrangers. She also "thinks" home --animals, neighborhood, town, creative aliveness, God and his world and destiny.

All have found their way into "A Grateful Heart."

"In these pages," said Mrs. Kirkland, who finds that for her no two days are ever alike, "I have tried to capture some of the fiber, the substance, the color of daily life. It cannot always be ideal or even totally happy. A full range of experience will include every facet -- the highs and lows, the fun, the accomplishments and failures within the daily existence."

Mrs. Kirkland believes that to find fulfillment in living one needs to be able to think small as well as large. Otherwise, many of the day's most brilliant, most unexpected moments will be lost, as well as subtle qualities of personality that comprise their true personalities.

From experiences of employment outside the home to being a "keeper at home," Mrs. Kirkland draws on the deep undercurrents of quiet living for the vehicle from which to tell her stories.

Some of the titles are The Shadows, Auld Acquaintance, Letter to Aunt Laura, Like a Mighty Army, Dear Sister, The Perils of Personality, Mercy with Cheerfulness, Autumn's Back in Town!, A Family of Strangers?, Lift That Pail!, One of Us Is Missing, Barbara, A Summer Storm, "Let's Look at the Flowers," Another World, Suzzanne, Keepers at Home, The Homecomings, andReunion.

Broadman Press comments, "Selections like 'The Shadows,' 'Like a Mighty Army' and 'The Homecomings' will both entertain you and give you points to ponder. A great book for giving and receiving."

One critic responded, "I love it! The book is wonderful."

Another said, "You make me want to live in your neighborhood to live in your life!"

Still another wrote, "Margie Kirkland's book, "A Grateful Heart," has warmed my heart with reflections on the daily lives of many individuals. She has shown that life is many faceted and has given us a heart warming insight to the abundant life within the framework of a Christian home. The thread of life and love that runs through each chapter will be in inspiration to every reader."

"It's just my cup of tea," expressed one critc.

"A Grateful Heart" is the work of a perceptive and seasoned writer who says "yes" to life, no matter what joys or sorrows it holds, learning from both, and deepening in her appreciation of persons for the good in them and for the contribution each makes to the world.

In a clear, gentle and at times playful manner, "A Grateful Heart" guides the reader toward new meanings and new joys in daily existence.

Margie Kirkland is the author of four books of poems. She also wrote and compiled "The Physicians: 100 Years of Dedication" for the Angelina County Medical Society. She is the author of "The Garage Apartment," a collection of nine stories which was published by Broadman Press in 1981.

A member of the Poetry Society of Texas, Mrs. Kirkland has had poems appearing in newspapers and magazines and has won awards in poetry competitions. She has been notified that she is a winner in the annual Rusk County Poetry Society Fall Festival of Poetry Contest.

She recently won the award for an essay on Varina Howell Davis, wife of Confederate States of America president Jefferson Davis.

The competiton was sponsored by the Texas Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Mrs. Kirkland is a columnist for the LUFKIN ADVERTISER and will be featured in issues of The East Texas Advocate.

Copies of A Grateful Heart can be bought at Christian's Words & Works. The book is a paperback and priced at $3.95.

Installation of officers and a talk by Mrs. Hudson on becoming an American citizen was the topic of the Sept. meeting of the Col. Elijah Isaacks Socitey, Texas Society Children of the American Revolution. Mrs. Elgin Hudson, a former citizen of Italy, described the steps she took to become a citizen of the U.S. Mrs. Hudson said she had always wanted to become a citizen and that she was proud to be an American. Mrs. Hudson married Mr. Hudson while he was still a member of the armed forces and they lived a number of places in Italy and Europe.

New officers were installed by Scott Adams, outgoing president. They are: Suzanne Bain, president; Kristen Talbert, vice-president; Michael Bain, chaplain; Melissa Berry, secretary; Christopher Adams, treasurer; Candace Berry, historian; Amy Huber, registrar; and Kristen Hall, librarian-curator.

Members also discussed the conservation meeting to be held in Oct. and made plans for a garage sale to be held in Nov. in Diboll.

OUR AMERICAN HERITAGE

Submitted to the State Chairman

In the summer of 1984, the Anthony Smith Chapter of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution received a request from the Angelina Chamber of Commerce to help make Lufkin, Texas a more beautiful city for Christmas by decorating a downtown store window for the month of December. Other civic clubs, Lufkin Service League and Garden Clubs were participating in this project.

We were given three big windows which were on each side of the front entrance of the building. We invited the CAR to take the opposite side from us as we have needed a project together.

We chose as the theme for our windows the D.A.R. Motto: God, Home, and Country. Christmas is a tradition in many ways carried from generation to generation from the beginning of our life in this country which has made our heritage.

We chose a mantle, hearth, and fireplace as the center. We have the cat and dog on the hearth with the old irons warming; the black kettle and churn near by. On the side of the fireplace stood the old shotgun. On the mantle top is the beautiful old manger scene of the birth of Jesus. Each end, the mantle has the glass hurrican lamps with candles. The lovely antique picture over the mantle is a very beautiful scene of a little old church and village. In front of the church, the children are bringing a Christmas tree in the snow. On each side of the print, our American flag is on the wall.

The January meeting of the Col. Elijah Isaacks Society, Children of the American Revolution, met at the Adams Farm.

The program was a question and answer program about the DAR Mountain Schools in which each member present participated. Mrs. Jerry Whiteker was hostess for the March 5 meeting of the Anthony Smith Chapter of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

For the program, Mary Read, head of the art department at Angelina College, gave a talk on "How Color Affects Our Lives." She said the origin of color remains a mystery, but its effect on our lives is recognized by scientists as well as laymen.

Mrs. Read gave a brief history of color stating that it is first mentioned in the Bible in the book of Genesis and that from earliest times certain colors have had a unique significance. For example, white symbolizes purity and holiness; red — life and joy; blue — calmness and serenity; purple — royalty and opulence.

Mrs. Read stated that we use color in our language to describe feelings such as "blue Monday" and "green with envy." Decorators use color to create a desired atmosphere in a room. Manufacturers use white to reflect heat and black to absorb heat. They use strong colors such as red and orange for warnings of danger.

In conclusion Mrs. Read stated that the colors of our nation's flag are significant and were chosen because they are strong colors that symbolize strength and courage.

Jim Carswell, the son of DAR member Mrs. Ray Carswell, was a special guest. Mrs. C.W. Alexander, Regent of the Anthony Smith Chapter, recognized him for having recently attained Eagle Scout rank. He led the group in the Pledge to the Flag.

Other guests were Mrs. Scottie Moody from Houston and Mmes. James Hinson and Richard Evers.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1985—

Constitution Week

Our Constitution, the cornerstone of our freedoms, was written to protect every American from the abuse of power by political parties as much as from abuses by kings. Without the determination to restrain the tempting excesses of political power, our Republic will perish. The Daughters of the American Revolution urge that we study the value of public service during Constitution Week which is Septembser 17 through 23. Today's problems call for the highest character of leadership. Read your Constitution.

DAR hears talk on Constitution

LUFKIN — The Anthony Smith Chapter of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution met Sept. 10 at the Harvest Room of Lufkin Federal Savings and Loan.

The guest speaker was Mayor Pitser Garrison who chose as his topic "The United States Constitution." He was introduced by Mrs. Loyd Richardson, Constitution Week chairman.

Mayor Garrison pointed out the benefits that citizens of the United States enjoy by virtue of the Constitution. Based on individual rights and free enterprise this great document has brought a quality of life to Americans that is envied by the whole world.

Mayor Garrison also pointed out that in recent years a quiet revolution is destroying the balance of power between the legislative and judicial bodies of our government. In the original concept the courts were to administer the laws as written. However, in recent years the courts have been prone to override the Constitution and to create new laws. In so doing the judiciary is setting social and economic standards according to the way they personally think it should be. Since they are appointed for life the people have no power to censure or rebuke them.

Mayor Garrison concluded by saying that our government was established through incredible sacrifice. It is in our trust and we should consider what legacy we will leave for the future.

Following the program, Mrs. C.W. Alexander, regent of the Anthony Smith Chapter, presented Community Service Awards to Diboll Mayor C.H. Shepherd and Free Press Editor Paul Durham. She cited their support and assistance to worthwhile projects in the community in general and particularly to the DAR.

Mrs. Alexander announced that the yearbook is dedicated to Mrs. R.P. Huber, a charter member of the Anthony Smith Chapter.

Two new members were recognized, Kitty Davis and Mrs. Doris Rose Hinson.

Mrs. Richardson announced plans for the observance of Constitution Week on Sept. 17 through 23. All citizens are urged to fly their flags during that week.

Mountain School slides are shown

The Col. Elijah Isaacks Society, Texas Society Children of the American Revolution met January 9 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Adams.

Approximately 60 slides of the Tamassee Mountain School of Alabama were shown. Angela Berry is the local Col. Elijah Isaacks Society CAR Mountain School Chairman.

This is a coed boarding school from kindergarten through high school. This school accepts anyone of any race or religion. These are children of very moderate means who do not live within commuting distance of a school. No child is refused because of lack of money. Not only do the children receive a fine education, they are taught the importance of work, independence and integrity and family life. Many scholarships are available.

Annually clothing, Green Stamps and soup labels are collected to help the school and the needs of the children. The members of the Col. Elijah Isaacks Society brought socks to be sent to the children of the school. They also brought Green Stamps and soup labels. This school is supported solely by the Daughters of the American Revolution and the children of the American Revolution.

The school also teaches the children native crafts such as weaving, woodworking and other crafts.

Delegates to the state convention to be held in San Antonio in March 21 were elected and plans discussed for attending the convention. Plans for a garage sale to help with the expenses of the convention were discussed.

The next meeting will be Saturday, Jan. 18 at 10 a.m. in the Old Orchard Park in Diboll.

The meeting will be for the government studies program. We are attempting to understand the impact of the western expansion in Texas. The children will experience one type of transportation. They will ride in a wagon and walk as many of the pioneers did and will meet the sesquicentennial wagon train that will be stopping in Diboll. The children will be dressed as the pioneers dressed.

MARGIE AND WILEY KIRKLAND journeyed to Sealy, Texas over the weekend where Margie joined a large group of Texas poets for poetic programs at the beautiful Gordon Memorial Library. The poets read their individual works from the book "From Hide and Horn," a sesquicentennial anthology which represents 150 years of Texas history as seen through the eyes of the poets. The programs were co-sponsored by the Rev. Jack W. Langford, vicar of St. John's Episcopal Church of Sealy and by Peggy and Edmund Lynch, active members of the Poetry Society of Texas who compiled the book for Eakin Publications, a specialist in Texana. Wiley has decided that during his retirement, with this constant exposure to the nobler things of life, he may become a budding poet himself. Margie is a member of the Poetry Society of Texas. Her year was 1870 that she was to use for her poem to be placed in "From Hide to Horn." She has reviewed the book for the Anthony Smith Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution and the 20th Century Reading Club. There are 150 poems in the book. Marge Beckham has a complimentary copy that she is going to donate to the Kurth Memorial Library in honor of the Angelina County Historical Commission of which Margie Kirkland is also a member. If other libraries would like a copy they can contact Margie Kirkland.

PROCLAMATION

The privilege of American citizenship is a sacred trust committed to our care. With privilege comes responsibility and a call to duty to participate in full measure in the American process. The staying power of responsible citizenship is based on reverencing God and respecting the dignity of man; adhering to the principles of the United States Constitution; respecting the Flag; exercising the right to vote; maintaining the integrity of the home and family; safeguarding our liberty and freedom; and appreciating the heritage of history which is ours.

We, the Duaghters of the American Revolution, want to do our part to guard the trust committed to our care. Let us pause to examine the blessings of American citizenship, and to rededicate ourselves to that sacred trust and the duty to which we are called. We therefore call on everyone to celebrate February as American History Month.

WHEREAS, The National Society Daughters of the American Revolution are dedicated to the achievement of three fundamental objectives: to perpetuate the memory and spirit of the men and women who achieved American Independence; to promote education, patriotism, civic responsibility and an enlightened public opinion; and to cherish, maintain and extend the institutions of American freedom, securing for mankind all the blessings of liberty; and as we pause to celebrate February 12 as Lincoln's Birthday and February 17 as Washington's Birthday.

WHEREAS, the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution have always recognized with pride the leadership, sacrifices and heroism of all the American forces who served bravely throughout the American Revolution;

RESOLVED, That the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution recognize the heroic contributions made by our patriots, who served their country with valor, helping to bring to a successful conclusion the American Revolution and to secure the sovereignty of this great Republic.

We request that American History be preserved, observed and studied, especially during the month of February.
