MR. AND MRS. W. S. BURCH

Meet Your Neighbors

W. S. Burches, Married Less Than Year, Move to Pineland in 1917

In the fall of 1917 a young W. S. Burch arrived in Pineland to begin his new job: checking lumber under Eddie Farley, the Shipping Clerk. With him was his bride, the former Love Smith, whom he had met at Browndell where she was working in the Commissary Store and married on May 12 of that year.

The Burches' first Pineland home was an apartment with the mill foreman at that time, Mr. John Hefner, in the house the Rasberrys live in now. And there in 1918 their son, W. S. Burch, Jr. was born.

"I knew from my first job," Mr. Burch stated, "That as long as I was in the sawmill business. I never wanted to work for anybody but the Temples."

This year, his forty-first with the company, proves he meant those words.

From shipping office, Mr. Burch went into the company store where he worked under Lane Harris, R. O. Murray, and J. B. Kilgore. In 1919, he was transferred to Diboll, and worked there under Mr. Bud Rutland who was general manager for all Temple stores.

In September of 1924 the Burches came back to Pineland. Mr. Burch took charge of the dry goods department of the Commissary Store, a position he held until August of 1933 when the family moved to Fastrel.

Fastrel was a Southern Pine Logging Camp. Mr. Hunter, the store manager there, had died and Mr. Burch took over his duties. Until the logging camp cut out, the family remained in Fastrel.

May 11, 1944, the Burches went to Diboll and once again Mr. Burch worked under Eddie Farley, "one of the finest men I ever knew," he stated in Pine Shipping.

Mr. J. B. Kilgore resigned his duties in the Commissary Store in Pineland in 1941 and the Burches came back here, where they have remained since. At the present time, he is working as Shipping Clerk in the Deminsion Plant, haveing worked in that same position at the Seat Plant, after he left the dry goods store.

Mr. and Mrs. Burch are members of the Pineland Methodist Church. Mr. Burch is also a City Alderman, member of the Service Club, and a member of Pineland Masonic Lodge No. 1166.

Market News from Southern Pine

(The STAR, feeling that market information from Southern Pine Lumber Company will be of interest to its readers, is beginning this week with a column which will be run regularly giving that information, sent in by R. M. Burns, assistant general sales manager at Diboll and C. H. Sanders, manager of Temple precision wood parts, Pineland.)

DIBOLL

SPIB 77 pine products and SP Supreme oak flooring products manufactured by Southern Pine Lumber Company sold very satisfactorily during the month of May. Our primary customer for SPIB 77 pine lumber products was the retail lumber dealer but the month of May proved fairly active in the sale of lumber products to industrialists.

It is our opinion that the volume of SP Supreme oak flooring sales will drop but we credit a portion of the decrease in volume to the fact that we are either sold up or oversold on most oak flooring items. We can look forward to a full work schedule based on shipments of orders on hand.

R. M. Burns, Diboll

PINELAND

At present, we are operating 8 hours a day, 40 hours a week, on a normal basis. While our order file is not as large as it normally is, this is the off-season for furniture manufacturers. However, we do not anticipate any further change or curtailment for the immediate future. In fact, with the furniture markets coming up at Chicago in June and Dallas in July, from all the information we have, the demand for furniture will pick up considerably after these markets.

C. H. Sanders, Pineland

Texas History to Be Reported In Frontier News

Houston— Colorful 100-year old Texas history is to be brought to the pages of the modern newspapers by the department of journalism and graphic arts of the University of Houston. Highlights, including politics, farm news and advertising, are taken from the yellowed pages of 100-year-old newspapers for weekly releases to newspapers over the state.

Knowing that Texas folks are intensely interested in the history of their state, Billy I. Ross, assistant professor of journalism at the University, conceived the idea of preparing historical-type human interest bits of news, to be made available - at no cost - to all weekly and daily newspapers over the state.

"The response has been tremendous, and the first releases are being made for use the first week in June," Ross said.

Charles Aycock, senior journalism major at the University, is doing the research and preparing copy that is distributed.

Ross said, if the interest by newspaper editors is any indication throughout the state, Texas history in our schools is far from lacking in student interest.

Everybody reads the classified ads. Use them to rent, sell or buy!

Penta pressure treated piling from Southern Pine Lumber Company goes into a new Angelina County Texas bridge to replace untreated members placed there four years ago when the bridge was last rebuilt.

Pictured above are officials and workmen of Angelina County as they observe a pile drive "building a bridge for permanancy" under the new county highway program. The man standing below the crane with his hand on some of the bridge decking is Commissioner Calvin Pouland in whose precinct the piling is being driven. At his left is Nolan Squyres, Southern Pine Lumber Company special sales representative. Behind Squyres is Hamp Davis, Commissioner for Precinct 3, Angelina County. Behind Pouland is Judge Clayton Malone of Polk County observing.

FROM THE RANGERS
Battle with the Indians!
76 OF THEM KILLED!

From the following letter from Camp Runnels, it will be seen that Captain Ford, with 213 Rangers and friendly Indians, had a fight with the Commanches on the 12th inst.

The engagement took place in the Wichita country, eight days' march from Camp Runnels. Our correspondent does not give the number of killed or wounded, etc.; but we learn from the official report of Captain Ford to the Governor, (which we would publish but for the length), that seventy-six Commanches were killed, eighteen taken prisoners; and of our men, only two were killed, (Robert Nickle and a Waco Indian), and three slightly wounded.

STATE NEWS

The Bonham "Independent" says, strawberries are abundant all over the prairies in that region.

A deck hand named Henry Clark, fell overboard from the steamer J. H. Bell, in the Trinity river, on the 20th ult., and was drowned.

The engine of the steam mill of Mr. J. W. Schrimpf, on Buffalo Bayou, burst its boiler one day last week, injuring two men considerably.

We learn from the Texas Baptist that an interesting revival of religion is going on in Anderson. Several have been added to the different churches.

A new Post Office has been established in Fayette county at a place called "Cistern," on the road from Bastrop to Gonzales, and A. D. Kendall appointed postmaster.

The Waco Southerner speaks encouragingly of the crop prospects in McLennan county, and says the wheat is turning out splendidly, and that engagements are being made to deliver flour in Waco at $3.00 per hundred.

The citizens of Young county have been driven by necessity to protect themselves against Indian depredations. At a recent public meeting they resolved to raise a company of Minute-Men to act as scouts to consist of 24 white men and 4 Indians. A subscription has been raised for the purpose of defraying all expenses. So says the Dallas Herald.

The Houston Telegraph is informed by the Agent of Redding & Co's. Express, that two men went to the plantation of General Welborne, in Fort Bend county, on Friday night, and represented themselves as clergymen, and asked permission to preach to the negroes. The overseer refused. They then asked to stay all night. The overseer informed them that the family was residing in town, and the house was locked up. In the altercation they seized upon the overseer, and while one held him, the other gashed him in an awful manner with his knife. The overseer is not expected to live.

LAWN MAINTENANCE AIDED BY PROPER MOWING

Constant care and attention are necessary for the maintenance of a beautiful lawn. One of the basic factors involved, says E. M. Trew, extension pasture specialist, is mowing.

Improper mowing is responsible for the deterioration of many lawns. Mowing too close encourages the thinning of the turf and shallow rooting, resulting in lower resistance to drouth, diseases and invasion by weeds. Setting the mower too high results in many of the same problems, says Trew. Excessive soil drying and baking and heat damage to the lawn grass during the summer also result from too close mowing.

The leaves of the lawn grass not only produce the green color, but also manufactures the food required for the entire plant. When too much of the leaves are clipped, the entire plant suffers, points out the specialist. No more than a half-inch of the leaf tip should be removed at any one mowing.

Creeping types of grasses can withstand closer mowing than bunch types. Bermuda should be mowed at a height of one to one and a half inches; St. Augustine, buffalo and zoysia, one and a half, while bluegrass and ryegrass should be mowed no closer than one and a half to two inches.

Many lawn enthusiasts like a dense mat of turf, but such a buildup of stems and leaves eventually leads to trouble, cautions Trew. The mat acts as insulation; new roots from stems must penetrate it to get to the soil, and it increases the disease hazard.

Proper mowing, advises Trew, requires a sharp, well-adjusted lawn mower. The mower should be sharp enough to cut the tips of the leaves without bruising or crushing them. The height of the bedknife should be determined by placing the mower on a flat surface and adjusting the set screws or bolts so that each end of the bedknife is exactly the desired height. Uniform mowing requires that the mower be adjusted at regular intervals, says Trew. For more information on home lawns, Trew suggests that a copy of B-203 be obtained from the local county extension office.

PULLORUM AND TYPHOID REPORTED ON INCREASE IN TEXAS

Reports from the three Texas Agricultural Experiment Station Poultry Diagnostic Laboratory indicate that the incidence of pullorum and typhoid are definitely on increase in Texas. And this, warns Bill Cawley, Texas supervisor for the National Poultry Improvement Plan, can mean trouble for the State's broiler growers.

Because of the highly competitive nature of the broiler business, the supervisor says, any situation which increases the chances for death or losses or the slowing down of the growth rate cannot be tolerated. The method of blood testing for the two diseases is well known and its value well established. For 20 years, points out Cawley, the NPIP has provided the procedure and standards for the tests under which participants have achieved marked success in controlling the incidence of the two diseases.

It is recognized, says Cawley, that blood testing is both labor and time consuming but the insurance which goes with the chicks produced under the Plan is worth a great deal to the buyer of the chicks. Hatcheries which operate under the NPIP are permitted to advertise their chicks as U.S. Pullorum and typhoid clean or passed.

Cawley reports that there has been a noticeable slackening on the part of some in the State's multimillion broiler industry to continue blood testing work. There has been a tendency to substitute drugs for blood testing and the reports from the diagnostic laboratories are proof of the failure of this method of prevention. The supervisor reports that no more than 8 to 10 incidences of the diseases per year had been reported in the State for the past 7 years, but between July 1, 1957 and April 25, 1958, he says, some 85 or 90 incidences have been reported, mostly in chicks produced in non-plan hatcheries.

Crawley urges the industry to take the steps needed to restore the effective program which has existed in Texas for many years before it is too late.

ONCE UPON A TIME there was a pretty savvy loon. He bought a new Mercury every year.

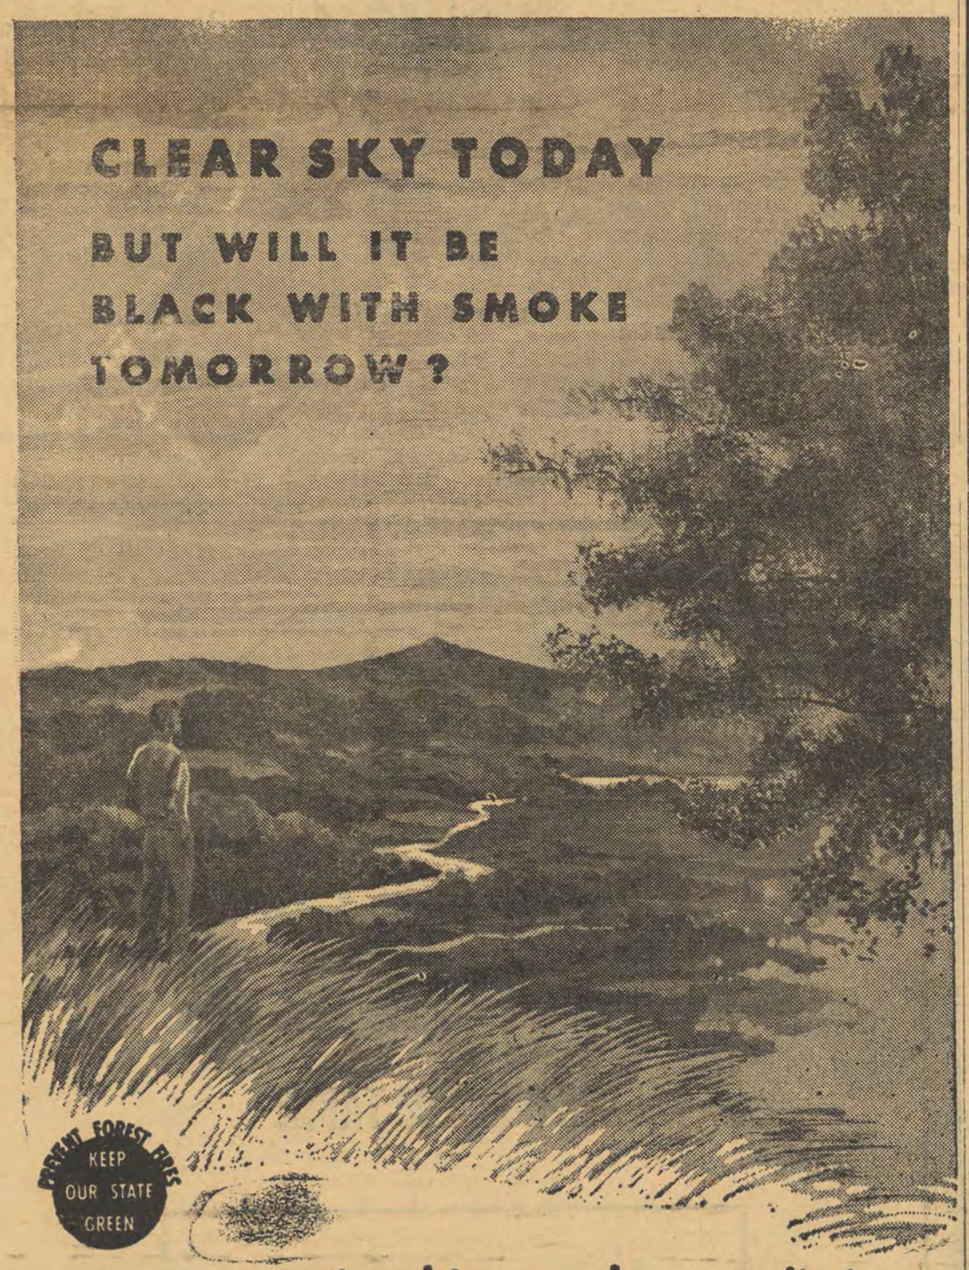

One day his feathered friends were hovering around giving him the bird. "How come?" they asked. Our boy replied, "Get in tune, loons. Mercury has everything: size, power, roominess, solid comfort, style and low cost. Mercury's a boon to a loon!"

Letter to the Star

Lets enjoy our teenagers. Recently, someone said, "what will we do with our teenagers this summer?" My answer is-Lets enjoy them. It takes so little to please them. This month I wrote Ricky Nelson, wished him a happy eighteenth birthday, told him how my children liked him, mentioned the older ones names and ages, and concluded with "stay as sweet, sincere, and real like you are as a teenager." I did not ask for an answer, but he surprised Brenda and Randal with a personal autographed picture, "To Brenda, Yours, Rick Nelson", and "To Rondal, Best wishes, Rick Nelson." Why, they will live ten years longer than their regular lives!

That is what I mean when I say it takes so little to please them—a swim, a picnic, a Coke party, with you there—they love it. Certainly, I say have jobs for them but then, we will do something together. If its a picnic, wear your pedal pushers, if its a rodeo, dress for it. Don't have that "I got to do it" feeling. Teenagers are not bad. We would be flabbergasted if we found ours had stolen peaches, watermelons, sugar cane, and even chickens—shall we say—like their dads did? Children have so many clean things to do today .You see them with white starched blouses, sports shirts, clean as a pin and just a bike—but happy.

When I see one who isn't happy or not exactly on the straight, I look beyond the child and wonder, has anyone loved him or planned for him, or given him some time—no body does it like mother. Lets not let our housework or own social doings leave a stone unturned for our child. A grandmother, from experience, said this week, "The clock will hardly turn until you'll wish they were back to mess up the house." A clerk said at rodeo season, when I was buying cowboy scarfs (one for me too), "You sure do enjoy your children, don't you?" Its fun when they are having fun.

Then come Sunday, dress and go to church with them. The picnics and parties without church will be like homemade rolls without the yeast. They will remember it and you for it—I do.

STAR COOKS

COOKING JELLY

Use six to eight cups juice at a time, and cook in preserving kettle 4 times as large as the amount of juice because of tendency to boil over.

Cook juice first for five minutes, add sugar and cook very rapidly until jellying stage is reached. Long, slow cooking produces dull, dark looking jelly of poor texture.

The jellying point is from 218 degrees to 222 degrees F. If no thermometer is available, allow a small amount of the juice to drop from the spoon. When the last two drops run together and sheet off from the spoon the jellying stage is reached, and the jelly should be removed from the heat at once.

Another test is to pour a spoonful of juice on a cool plate and draw a mark through it with the edge of a spoon. If the jelly does not run together again, it is done.

One vital point the cook books fail to mention; the result of a jelly recipe is not necessarily jelly.

Two essentials a fruit must have, and in proper proportions, if it is to be made into jelly – pectin and acid. However, these change with the maturity of the fruit, both decreasing as the fruit ripens. Then too, some fruits contain sufficient pectin, but lack the acidity necessary for perfect jelly making. Others contain enough acid, but have insufficient pectin.

More jelly failures are caused by adding too much sugar than by any other factor. In general, 2/3 as much sugar as fruit is sufficient.

Too little sugar will cause the jelly to be too firm. Too much sugar will produce a weak, sirupy jelly. The optimum amount of sugar varies with the amount of pectin, acid, and water present and cannot be given exactly. In case of doubt it is always better to use less sugar than more sugar.

Simply by contending with such uncertain variables, I have found making jelly failures much easier than making jelly.

Cookbooks list numerous jellies: apple, blueberry with lemon juice, crab apple, currant, gooseberry (green), grape (underripe), black raspberry, cherry, peach, Dawson plum, elderberry, barberry, guava, loquat, roselle, quince, mint, and Paradise.

My latest Jelly Failure, however, was MAYHAW.

In the first place, I forgot to find out the maturity of the fruit. Probably the pectin and acid had lessened with old age.

Or does Mayhaw contain acid but too little pectin? Is the pectin content sufficient but the necessary acidity for perfect jelly lacking in the Mayhaw?

There was no such thing as a mayhaw in my cookbooks. I couldn't even find the word mayhaw in the dictionary.

No doubt the amount of sugar I used was not Optimum.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hayes and Carl went to a Homecoming in New Willard Sunday.

Wood Not Necessaily Rustic Material

One of the great fallacies about wood is that the material "necessarily" establishes a rustic setting.

Actually, a wood exterior or interior is 'rustic' only if the home owner wants it so, the Southern Pine Association declares. Otherwise, its appearance can be just as smooth and sophisticated as those plush offices on Madison Avenue in New York or the Florida seashore resorts of Miami and Palm Beach.

And whatever the choice, there is amazingly little difference in cost.

Because of the label of rusticity, there once was a time when Southern Pine paneling was consigned to the relative obscurity of the den or study. A rustic air was in keeping, of course, with the traditional leather chairs, hunting trophies and tobacco odor; so wood was selected with emphasis on its growth characteristics, which was how the term "Knotty pine" became a familiar household term.

Familiar principally, however, in the man's stronghold and only rarely in milady's bedroom or parlour.

The truth is, it can be equally pleasing to both sexes, since the modern grades of siding and paneling are just as adaptable to effete feminine tastes as to the more rugged and purely masculine motifs.

In Southern Pine, you can still get the traditional "knotty pine," for sure. But you also have the grades that provide clear lumber whose durable but satiny surface emits a soft sunshiny blush as balm for exquisite modern interiors.

With these modern treatments, the natural beauty of wood is retained—even enhanced—while it is anything but rustic. The air of elegance, of sophistication is heightened by the wide range of finishes which give milady color choices ranging from natural light gold to delicate eggshell blue or dark greys and green, whatever hue she envisions as the best match for her upholstery and drapes.

Ideal settings for such paneling are the more expensive, key rooms of the contemporary home, dining-kitchen, even the bathroom. It is also most effective for the classroom walls of schools.

The use of high quality, well-seasoned wood in a good modern design is also a prime factor of durability. The paneling itself is a permanent fixture, highly resistive to blemish and easily cleaned, while the finishes are so durable that 10 to 15 years and even longer will elapse before a refinishing job is required.

Much the same is true of modern patterns and applications of Southern Pine siding. A far cry, indeed, from the pine log exteriors of folklore and legend, the wood facing of the contemporary home is the very source of its modern look. The way the boards are arranged, the numerous focal points, as well as the combination of beauty and bright color, are the ingredients that blend into the total eye appeal.

ALVIE KNOWS A LOT OF ANSWERS

How long does it take to hatch an ostrich egg? . . . . How many bachelors in Bolivia?? . . . . How much blubber in a male whale??? Alvie knows these answers and a jillion others. Folks smile and agree that Alvie is a regular encyclopedia of "useless information" but they never question the accuracy of his peculiar knowledge. That's because everybody knows Alvie gets his "answers" by memorizing the little space-fillers we all see in our newspapers. And to all of us, what we see in our home-town newspaper is immediately acceptable and believable!

The same is particularly true of advertising. To put your advertising message before all the people . . . put it in your HOMETOWN NEWSPAPER
