DEDICATED TO THE PROGRESS OF PINELAND AND SURROUNDING COMMUNITIES

VOLUME 1—NUMBER 27 | THE PINELAND STAR, PINELAND, TEXAS, THURSDAY, OCT. 23, 1958 | $2.00 PER YEAR

Market News from Southern Pine

SPIB 77 lumber product sales are slightly less than we had hoped for the first half of October. However, we continue oversold in No. 2 and No. 3 Common items. This oversold condition on salt and pepper items naturally puts us in a position where we cannot presently provide the service that our customers demand. If the market continues at its present slow rate, we should find ourselves in a position to service all customers more efficienty and consequently develop more orders through prompt service.

SP Supreme Oak Flooring sales continue slow but we are now concentrating an effort toward moving some Select and Clear Oak Flooring that we have in surplus. This should pick up our volume of sales promptly and directly help our rate of shipments. The Oak Flooring market is unique at present in that the price of No. 1 Common, Select and Clear are very nearly the same. This is due to a continued demand for No. 1 Common Oak Flooring in the $13,500 to $14,500 home bracket. Consumers do not wish to take advantage of the weak market on the higher grades as they feel that they will be faced with the problem of furnishing a home with Select and Clear Oak Flooring when the market returns to normal which would be prohibitive.

R. M. Burns

Temple seat sales have not been as good this week as last. However, the volume sold is in line with our current plant production.

At this time the price of seats continues to ease off.

It is still hoped that increased residential construction and improvement of business generally, will give better prices and better operating results before the end of 1958.

Don H. Burnley

Temple treat sales were not too brisk for the week of October 13th. Orders received were just slightly above capacity to process and pressure treat. While we did not build up our back log of orders, we did not reduce it. Generally speaking, our Temple treat business is good.

Hardwood orders came in at a very slow rate this week principally because we did not have dry lumber to offer the trade. There were a number of inquiries on which we were unable to quote. Hardwood prices continue firm, and the demand for dry hardwood exceed the supply.

E. B. Price

We have the best balanced order file for our furniture dimension stock at present that we have had for several months. While business is still very competitive due to the low prices established last summer by the furniture manufacturers, our production is normal, and we do not anticipate any changes in our production for the immediate future. From all indications, all furniture manufacturers will raise prices during the January market which will put them in a better position to pay more for their furniture stock.

Star Gazing

BY CHARLOTTE SMITH

Willard Neal said he read it in the Houston Post - Earl Wilson's credit. "A hypocrite is a man who goes to work at 6 o'clock in the morning with a smile on his face."

The hula hoop proves one thing posiTIVEly. It's still possible to make a million in a hurry.

Nobody asked me, but in case anybody ever does I have an answer ready which would rearrange the entire educational system, automatically taking care of teachers' salaries, a revised curriculum, the report card, extra-curricula activities, more stress on science and foreign languages, how, when, and whether we should or should not stress phonetics, to what extent discipline should be carried, whether we should take the paddle to the child, the child to the principal, the principal to the superintendent, or all three to the psychiatrist. Little things like this, which I come across daily in my brief moments devoted to reading what somebody else, besides myself, writes. If all parents had to teach school one year, and all educators had a few children of their own to struggle with daily at home, there never would be any educational problems to speak of anyway.

There is one lesson none of us should be too old to study - not that any of us could ever learn it. This is the study of forgetting. Learn to forget. Practice it. Become an expert at forgetting.

al the mean fwords-ta -i lea

Concentrate on forgetting: all the mean words, all the unkind acts, the deep wrongs, the bitter disappointments, the petty annoyances, the vexing irritations in life. Then the memory, with fewer things to remember, will become quick and alert in remembering the good, the worthwhile, and the beautiful.

WANTED! A sports writer. Apple Springs played ball in Pineland Thursday night. The Apple Springs girls beat our girls 46-37. Our boys beat the Apple Springs boys 39-30. There should be more to a sports story than the score. Anyone who wants a sports column, please contact me.

The price of the wheat is thy copper; the price of the farm is thy silver; the price of the pearl is thy gold; the price of love is thyself.

The seventh grade, to raise money for their queen candidate, gave a Scavenger Hunt Monday night which came very near putting the STAR out of business for this week. A few of the items requested at my house were a 2c stamp, a 1c post card, a 1955 calendar, an August 1958 issue of the Beaumont Enterprise, an S&H green stamp, Mr. E. C. Nick's signature, a 1957 license plate, a hickory nut, a black stocking, a worn out left handed broom, a candle, an empty shot gun shell, a picture of George Washington, a burned out light bulb, a stuffed olive, an old horse shoe, a dried ear of corn, a four leaf clover.

The Scavengers who came to my house won the Hunt. But it did take a while to round up one or two articles. Besides, one of the children got a bug or something in her eye while here, and I had to hunt eye drops too.

Brooks Praises Weekly Papers

Congressman Jack Brooks has paid tribute to the weekly newspapers of East Texas for their signal contribution to the continued progress of our area and the preservation of principles up-holding freedom of the press. He made the tribute on the occasion of National Newspaper Week.

"No one has worked harder year in and year out to help make new opportunities for our people through full development of our natural resources than our weekly newspaper editors and publishers," Congressman Brooks declared. "We're always able to count on our weekly newspaper folks for all the help they can give to such vital projects to the future of Southeast Texas as McGee Bend Dam."

A former newspaperman himself, Congressman Brooks has often been critical of the way important news has been withheld from Congress, the press and the general public by the Defense Department and other federal agencies under the Eisenhower administration. "Freedom of the press is like any other of our Constitutional rights as an American citizen. We have to keep working to preserve them and use them every day or they'll die on the vine.

"Our weekly newspapers are closer to our people than any other news media. They are the real grass roots of American journalism. The big daily newspapers in our cities stand

Temple Seats Sales Set Record

The sale of Temple Seats during the first ten months of 1958 has set a new record, according to Don Burnley, Temple Seat Sales Manager in Diboll, Texas.

An increase of 38.74 per cent over 1957 is reported. 1957 reflected a similar increase over 1956 and was itself the record year until the current one.

September, similarly, set an all time high in Southern Pine Lumber Company, manufacturers of Temple Seats, for a single month when a 35.38 per cent increase in seat sales was registered over the month of August.

"Our demand is definitely increasing", according to Burnley, "and we interpret it as part of the improvement of business conditions. The improved Temple Seat has found a responsive market and increased construction over the country is taking larger quantities of plumbing supplies."

Although market pressures will undoubtedly cause some upward tendency in the price of seats during the months ahead, Burnley does not look for a return to prices prevalent a few years ago, he said. Improved quality control and plant efficiency such as that achieved by advanced companies like Southern Pine Lumber Company make possible a better product at plant savings which are passed on to the trade.

Purchasing agents who formerly let price be their only consideration in purchasing plumbing supplies are now very conscious, says Burnley, and recognize more generally that premium products are entitled to a somewhat better price than marginal ones previously accepted as standard.

This new emphasis on quality is undoubtedly the result of the education afforded by the exceptionally fine trade press within the plumbing industry, he says.

State Officer Speaks to Baptist Ass'n

Dr. Arthur Rutledge, secretary of stewardship and direct missions for the Baptist General Convention of Texas will be one of the principal speakers at the annual Sabine Valley Baptist Association meeting Thursday, Oct. 16, at the First Baptist Church of Jasper.

Carl Greer of San Augustine, moderator of the association, said Dr. Rutledge reported on denominational work and outlined goals for next year's state Baptist program.

As secretary of stewardship and direct missions, Dr. Rutledge coordinates the missionary and stewardship of the associations, the 17 districts and 11 city mission programs in Texas.

He is also in charge of Jewish evangelism for the BGCT, the convention's program of church building consultation, and the Southern Baptist Forward Program of Church Finance.

Working with the district secretaries and the associational and district stewardship chairmen, Dr. Rutledge promotes the cooperation program through regular giving on a percentage basis, striving for an annual increase in percentage of gifts.

Purpose of the associational meeting was to bring messengers from all churches in the association together to share progress reports, get firsthand knowledge of denominational work and hear inspirational messages.

More people attend the annual meetings in Texas' 125 Baptist association than either the Southern Baptist Convention or the Texas Baptist convention.

A week ago last Monday I went to Baton Rouge to speak before the Mid-South Section of Forest Products Research Society. FPRS is a national organization whose purpose it is to give individuals concerned with research in forest products an opportunity to meet and tell one another what they have discovered. At meetings like the one in Baton Rouge, different people "present papers", which is the way information is read and then published.

They kept speaking of my "paper", when all I had was a few notes on a scratch pad. Any reader of "Bread 'n Butter" (if there are any) could pretty well figure what my "paper" was all about when I spoke before the group. Same old idea: if people who make their living out of forest products would just speak up for them, we'd have half our marketing problem solved. Until they do, we know how to make more things than we know how to sell. The folks there received my remarks very kindly and my "paper" taken off a tape recorder will be published in the FPRS Journal.

That's the only time I'll ever get to pretend I'm a scholar.

One person I met there was a Mr. Naggan from Tel Aviv, Israel. After my talk he urged, since I talked about the new wood school in Diboll, that we tell Diboll children everything about the wood in the school, so that they will grow up loving it.

He said they have so few trees in Israel that children must, on their one day a week out of school, get a tree from a nursery and go plant it in the country. Practically the only trees there are ones they have planted. He repeated what we hear so often, that we do not appreciate wood fully until we lack it.

Paul Kramer and Monte Childs from Texas Forest Service were there and Dr. Arne Kemp, head of forestry at Stephen F. Austin was too. They are very important people and help the products that put our bread and butter on the table. They do fine work far beyond what they are paid for. I was proud that they were among those representing Texas.

Another name I want to pay tribute to is that of A. K. Anderson, inspector for the city of Lufkin. I got to know A. K. when we were both working in Little League together and learned there that he was a man who goes far beyond "the call of duty" to do the right thing by his fellow man. I have never found any problem too small or too big for him to give his careful and sympathetic attention to.

We were talking the other day about the possibility of using wood attractively on a Lufkin downtown exterior and he started talking about the importance of wood to this area. He exhibited a knowledge of the properties of properly manufactured lumber which would do credit to a successful lumber manufacturer or an instructor in engineering.

If more cities had people like A. K. on their engineering staffs, some of tomorrow's slums being built today would be prevented.

We've talked in this column about paint staying on exteriors of quality southern pine and I am reminded by some of the construction hereabouts of one of the peculiar problems that has come up in recent years.

People frame a house with green lumber and then put good dry southern pine on the outside. The green lumber dries out inside the house, the studs shrink and the nails get loose. There have been instances of the dry siding bowing a little in the sun and pulling the loose nails out. When this happens, does the green studding get the blame? Of course not. The quality southern pine does.

In this type of faulty framing the green lumber gives up its moisture within the wall of the house rather than in a dry kiln where it should have been dried originally.

The framing in an ordinary five room house has about ten fifty gallon drums of water in it before it is dried. This means that when you close up green lumber in the structure of a house you are framing in up to that amount of water.

This water has to go somewhere and one place it goes is through the dry southern pine siding. The dry siding offers a wick action. This moisture coming through the board from the back side naturally drives the paint off the surface.

What gets the blame? The green framing? Of course no. The quality southern pine siding, properly dried according to methods approved by U.S. Forest Products Laboratory and 350 years of lumber manufacturing experience, gets the blame.
